

Pour les élèves à besoins particuliers, il est préférable de faire prendre appui sur certaines polices et certaines tailles de polices qui facilitent la lecture d'un document.

Pour cet article, la police utilisée est Arial 14.

Dans un support écrit, les éléments soulignés peuvent être difficiles à lire pour des élèves à besoins éducatifs particuliers.

Afin de rendre un document écrit plus accessible pour ces élèves, il convient de ne pas y avoir recours.

Royal family: Prince Harry and Meghan give up titles and duties

19th January 2020, BBC Newsround

Prince Harry and Meghan have officially given up their royal titles

Earlier this month the royal couple announced that they wanted to step down as senior members of the Royal Family.

This means they would give up their official titles as 'His/Her Royal Highness', and no longer receive money from the public.

The Queen has now approved this decision saying: "It is my whole family's hope that today's agreement allows them to start building a happy and peaceful new life."

The couple have also said they would like to repay the public money that was used to do up their house Frogmore Cottage.

A statement from Buckingham palace confirmed that these changes would happen in spring this year.

Harry will still get to keep his title as "Prince", because he was born into the Royal Family.

The couple will also get to keep their titles as the Duke and Duchess of Sussex.

Prince Harry and Meghan have said they will split their time living in Canada and their home in the UK.

Alors que des textes à multiples colonnes peuvent être difficile d'accès pour les élèves (à besoins éducatifs particuliers), il est utile de proposer une règle de lecture afin de fixer le regard de l'élève. Ainsi, il/elle peut clairement identifier où commence et finit la ligne, ce qui facilite sa lecture.